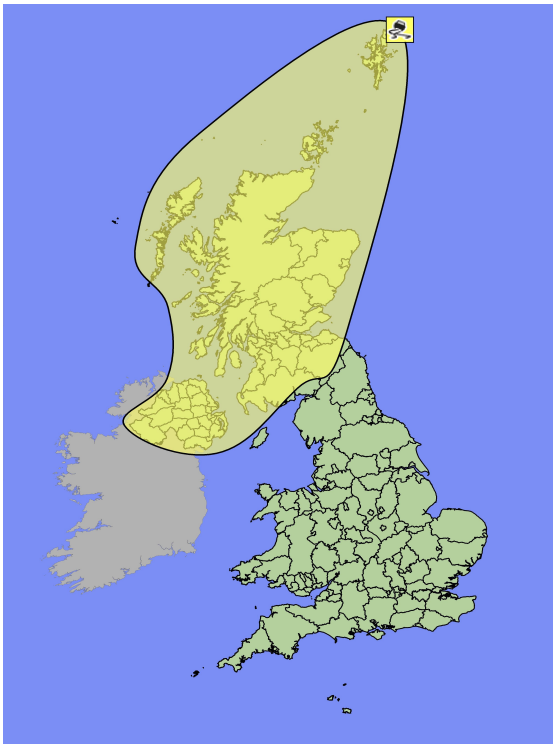
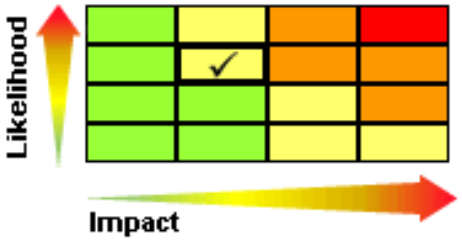
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
The cold, showery air mass will remain over the area through the period, showers falling as an awkward mix of rain, sleet and snow. Whilst snow will fall mainly on high ground, surfaces at all levels wetted by rain and sleet will freeze at times to give icy conditions.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 17:00 on Thu, 26th Jan 2012 until 11:00 on Fri, 27th Jan 2012

Icy stretches are expected to form on untreated surfaces, especially in places affected by showers. The showers will fall as snow above about 250 metres but there will be temporary slush deposits to lower levels.
The public should be aware of possible travel disruption.
